DAN PLONSEY CALLS IT A FAT LADY

at least once

The Composers' Cafeteria was a composer's cooperative which existed for some time in and around Berkeley, California. The group came into existence as the result of a great many factors, desires, ideals, needs, etc., all of which contributed to its greatness as well as to its inevitable downfall. Among those ideals were the notions that performers and composers ought to exchange roles for best results, and that pretty much anyone can write music which would be less boring and more meaningful than what is being played in universities and by "new music ensembles." The Cafeteria succeeded in demonstrating that both of these propositions are correct. If only the Cafeteria had recognized certain corollaries to these obvious truths! The group's demise might have been averted, or at least delayed. Especially the corollary that states: Composers who do not play an instrument with reasonable skill are parasites and are killing music. And also: Composers whose aim is to have their pieces performed in universities and by "new music ensembles" are going to drive us all crazy with their constant whining. Less obvious was the hard-learned manifesto-item: No more deadbeat ringers.

cafeteria history in a nutshell

Observe the changes to the Cafeteria's motto over time:

"We of The Composers' Cafeteria do believe that every musical composition deserves one performance." - Chris Maher, February, 1987

"Every piece deserves to be heard once."
- "Official" Cafeteria motto

"We of The Composers' Cafeteria have no common tastes in music, but we do share the proposition that each composition deserves to be heard once. Okay, and also that each proposition is true at least once. And this is the 'once!'" - Dan Plonsey and Tom Statler, May, 1987

"Every piece deserves to be heard once - but not by us!" - anon., 1989

"Every piece deserves to be performed once. 'Ha, ha, suckers!'" - James Jacobs, July 1989

DJ CYPD CALLS IT A DAY

jaunpuri

It is easy to associate music with the evening or night. When all has been accomplished, cut loose and have some fun. Whether clubs or concert halls, the main event is seldom a matinee. Night music eclipses that of the day; so much so, that one tends to forget, that there even is such a thing. And if there were, how could we hear it?

Daylight hours should be occupied by productive endeavors; so am I talking about the muzak they play in grocery stores? For some people yes. At the same time the Bay Area offers up culinary diversity, at our local farmers markets, home grown talents pluck, croon, and fiddle from between the vendor's stalls. Ok. So there is that, and I can listen while doing the laundry; however, serious music must have concerts.

get together at the Nabolom cafe to riff on the old time standards of jazz and big band. They use an eclectic arrangement of home made and pro-type instruments. The cover is simply the price of a danish and a cup of coffee. You don't even have to rise with the rooster, because they don't really get going until 11. Bring your kazoo on the first weekend of the month for the audience participation session; easily improvise along with subconscious melodies you forgot that you even remembered.

Yes, time has been a fundamental component of music that transcends period and culture. Taking the long view, Indian Classical music specifies unique styles to be performed based on our planet's daily cycle. For you and me, this can mean rediscover the decadent luxury of a sunday afternoon jam session with friends. So let the music resonate with the sunshine. ❖

about this thing

The Transbay Creative Music Calendar is a volunteer-produced free monthly journal for non-commercial creative new music in the San Francisco Bay Area. In addition to our comprehensive listing of upcoming events, we publish articles and reviews about local music and the people who create it. We talk about a wide range of modern music, including: experimental, improvised, noise, electronic, free-jazz, outrock, 21st century compositions, and sonic art. Each month, 1,000 copies of the Transbay are mailed to individuals and hand-delivered to over 45 performance venues and public locations throughout the Bay Area.

ROVATE 2009

FISSURES, FUTURES (for Buckminster Fuller)

8PM MAY 22-23, 2009

Rova Saxophone Quartet (Larry Ochs, Jon Raskin, Bruce Ackley, Steve Adams) • Lillevan
Carla Kihlstedt • Lisle Ellis • Charlotte Hug • Thomas Lehn • Kjell Nordeson • Joan Jeanrenaud

Rova Saxophone Quartet returns to Kanbar Hall for a no-sounds-barred evening of improvisation. Berlin-based multimedia artist Lillevan joins world-renowned musical innovators in Fissures, Futures, dedicated to the 20th century oracle Buckminster Fuller. Creating visual fragments inspired by Fuller's genius, and influenced by the musical ensemble surrounding him, Lillevan will produce spontaneous films and animation in real time. An amazing experience of sight and sound – not to be missed!
